

~~DOGGIN' THE GAP~~

Delaware Water Gap

NY/PA

Mt. Tammany (trail time - about 4 hours)

The Delaware Water Gap, a mile-wide break in the spine of the Appalachian Mountains, is renowned for its depth, width and dramatic beauty. Travelers and settlers have long taken advantage of this breach in the Kittatinny Ridge, caused by a powerful combination of continental drift, ages of mountain building and the relentless action of the river that twists in a tight "S" curve.

Our dogs will enjoy the views of the Water Gap from the trail.

We will hike with our dogs to the top of 1,527-foot Mt. Tammany on a rocky, twisting trail. For our effort we will purchase gigantic views across the Gap. Our return will be down the backside of the mountain and through Dunnfield Hollow on an old logging road beside the quick-paced Dunnfield Creek.

These guys take a well-earned rest at the summit of Mt. Tammany.

This canine swimming hole in Dunnfield Hollow is a welcome find on the way back from Mt. Tammany.

Van Campens Glen (trail time - about one hour)

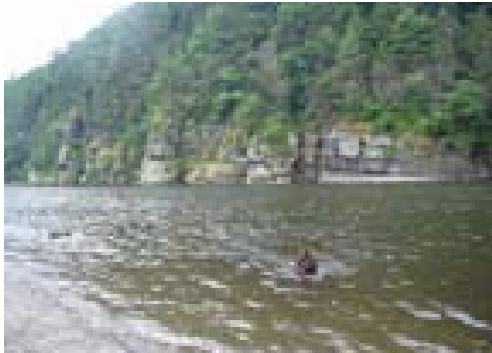

An sporty rambling leads to a sparkling waterfall. Even on a hot day your dog will stay cool hiking in a shady ravine beside an energetic stream. A fine place for a mid-day picnic.

Pocono Environmental Education Center (trail time - about 2 1/2 hours)

We get our choice of five hiking loops here, high above the Delaware River. We'll start on the sporty Tumbling Waters Trail that stretches for three miles past two scenic ponds, through a pine-and-hemlock forest, up the ominously named Killer Hill to reach a switchbacking path down to a series of powerful cataracts that are in a serious hurry to get down that mountain.

Playing in a plunge pool of a waterfall is standard far in the gap.

There will plenty of opportunities for a canine swim along the Delaware River.

Yes! I want to join the pack for the Doggin' The Gap Trip
